Community Leaders Welcome College

Mr. Leon Van Hoven
Executive Vice President
Western Nevada College
Carson City, Nevada 89701

Dear Mr. Van Hoven:

I would like to join the citizens of Nevada in welcoming Western Nevada College to Carson City and to the western portion of Nevada.

The addition of more educational facilities to the area will undoubtedly help the citizens of Nevada by giving them the opportunity to take advantage of our fine community college system.

Sincerely,

Carson Joins College System

We are very pleased that Western Nevada Community College will open its doors for the first time to students on Oct. 30. The College will provide programs for students in three of these areas this fall. Those are business, health and public service. Agricultural programs are provided in the State at Elko Community College while the industrial programs for this area are provided this year by the University of Nevada at Reno.

The chief purpose of Western Nevada Community College will be to provide occupational programs for its students. These programs are designed to educate students for semi-skilled professions, skilled professions and semi-professional technical jobs. The programs are varied in length as some of them may be completed in one year while others will take two years to complete. At any rate, the programs in the comprehensive community college will provide basic employment skills and knowledge for the students.

The Community College Division of the University of Nevada System has divided its occupational programs into five broad areas. These areas are agriculture, business, health, industrial and public service. Western Nevada Community College will provide programs for students in three of these areas this fall. Those are business, health and public service. Agricultural programs are provided in the State at Elko Community College while the industrial programs for this area are provided this year by the University of Nevada at Reno.

Western Nevada Community College will provide programs in the business areas in bookkeeping, accounting, secretarial, retailing and marketing. In the health fields it will provide programs in registered nursing and radiology. The programs in registered nursing for this fall will only be the second year to enable those students who have completed the first year at the University of Nevada at Reno to complete the program. It is the intention of the College to start the first year in 1972. Public Service programs will be provided in fire science, hotel management, culinary arts, law enforcement and teacher aide.

These programs will provide middle manpower occupational needs for the State of Nevada. The College will operate on certain basic principles of collegiate technical programs in community colleges. The College will be an open door college with unrestricted admission to all high school graduates or those who have the equivalency of a high school diploma. Courses and curriculums, however, may be open only to those students with proper preparation. If a student is not ready to enter some of the regular courses, developmental or remedial courses will be provided for these students. In most of the occupational areas there will be programs on two different levels. This will enable the student to work on the level that he desires. All of the associate degree programs will have sufficient content in general education and in supporting theory courses. These courses are not necessarily college parallel courses or transfer courses, but they do help the student to learn how to live as well as to make a living. High quality guidance services will be provided for students seeking courses in the vocational-technical areas.

The curriculum is planned on the core approach — that is most of the curricula will be geared to job chances so that a student may be oriented to many different areas rather than just one particular job. This means that the students completing the program should have greater occupational mobility and lower rates of unemployment caused by technological change.

Western Nevada Community College intends to maintain continuous contact with business and industry primarily through active advisory committees. In this way it is hoped that the best career education possible will be made available for students. Through these various occupational programs, Western Nevada Community College hopes to assist the State of Nevada in solving some of its manpower needs.

Carson City Campus - Administrative Hub

By Leon Van Doren, Executive Vice-President

The Carson City Campus of Western Nevada Community College has become the administrative hub of the new eight-county community college program. The central location of the administrative function for the new Western Nevada Community College program is developing along the lines outlined for the five major functions of the comprehensive educational philosophy for community colleges.

Vocational—occupational education is our major thrust. It is planned that sixty per cent of our planning and programs development will come in vocational-occupational development. The second major emphasis will be to provide the lower division collegiate or transfer function for students who desire to pursue the first two years of a baccalaureate program in the community college environment. In addition to students who will be pursuing the educational goal of university parallel work, the students in the occupational programs will be pursuing one-third of their preparation in communication skills, constitution and government, mathematics, science, social science, and behavioral sciences and humanities.

A counseling and guidance program provides each student with program, personal, financial, and general information counseling and guidance services. The counselors will have complete information on programs and courses, graduation requirements, and entrance requirements for all who are interested in Western Nevada Community College, plus the other institutions of higher education in the state.

Western Nevada Community College is planning to implement a comprehensive developmental education program. When developed, this program will permit persons with learning problems to work on an individual or group learning curriculum.

The final function of our comprehensive program permits Western Nevada Community College to provide community service programs in each of the centers served. Our arts and crafts course in Carson City is very popular. We are cooperating with the the enthusiasm of the people of Carson City, have made our settling-down process very easy. We are looking forward to an early development of the new campus site that is located in the northwest area of the city. We are optimistic that the next session of the Legislature will provide the necessary support to begin a major building program on the new campus site. This new campus will permit the continued growth and development of Western Nevada Community College.

Instructor in Mathematics

CHAUNCEY W. OAKLEY

Mr. Chauncey W. Oakley, Reno, instructor in Mathematics, brings to the Community Colleges in Nevada a long and distinguished career in the field of mathematics. He began his teaching career as principal of a junior high school in Pennsylvania, where he taught ninth grade algebra. Mr. Oakley had the honor of entering the teaching profession directly after graduation from high school with certification granted after only one summer session attended at a State Teacher's College. At the conclusion of his first year, Mr. Oakley spent the next two years attending Mansfield State Teacher's College in Pennsylvania where he graduated with a teacher's certificate to teach mathematics in high school. Later he attended Geneva College, University of Pittsburgh, and returned to Mansfield to receive his B.S. in Education with a major in mathematics.

Mr. Oakley later received a Master's Degree from Pennslyvania State University, and completed considerable graduate work towards the doctor's degree at Rutgers University.

Mr. Oakley comes to the Community College with a broad field of teaching experience which includes positions in junior and senior high schools, Junior College and University teaching in his field. While chairman of the Mathematics Department in a large high school in New Jersey, he authored several mathematics which were used nation-wide in high schools. His books also include many on the college level.

Mr. Oakley was granted Emeritus status at Commonwealth Examiners on the University of Nevada Reno Campus last June, after completing fifteen years teaching at the university.

Community leaders welcome college

University of Nevada System

By Neil D. Humphrey, Chancellor
Community College System

The University of Nevada System is pleased to welcome Western Nevada Community College into the family of higher education in the State of Nevada.

The comprehensive community college program will provide a new breath of educational opportunity for the people of western Nevada. The open-door philosophy, combined with the community center operations, will assist the rural communities in this area in developing "at home" courses and programs. This will aid in keeping the cost of higher education at a level of cost that will ease some of the financial strain for families.

Although late in entering the field of community college development, the growth and success of Elko Community College serves as a beacon of development for our expanded programs.

Open letter to the Staff of the Nevada Community College

The University of Nevada Board of Regents and the administrative staff of the University of Nevada System are to be congratulated for their prompt and efficient implementation of the Community College System to Nevada. The establishment of the center in Carson City is certainly a wise move in providing educational opportunities in this area.

The dedication to the success of the community college on the part of Chancellor Humphrey, and Charles Beneke, President of the Community College System and the personnel of the administrative staff of the University of Nevada System, is to be commended as a notable contribution to the educational effort in Nevada, and all concerned are to be commended for a commendable and most significant effort.

The emphasis and focus of the current educational community in Nevada is being emphasized by the establishment of community colleges in Elko, Carson City, and the University of Nevada System. This will be to the advantage of both the educational and commercial aspects of the state.

The State Department of Education stands ready to provide support and assistance in whatever capacity to help promote the community college system as a vital and valuable part of the entire Nevada educational system.

Once again, congratulations to all those responsible for making the community college a reality in Nevada.

Community leaders welcome College

From two aspects I'm really pleased at the opening of Western Nevada Community College in Carson City.

First, we are now offering an opportunity for education beyond high school to that segment of our young people who do not aspire to an academic degree for Nevada is the last state to recognize the real need for a community college system.

Second, I believe that a community college campus located in Carson City will be the best industry that Carson has received since it was named state capital.

The community college campus in Carson City will be highly beneficial to the community because of the people that will be a part of Carson City, the facilities that will be used by all citizens, and the opportunities that will be given to all our high school graduates because courses will be offered in most Western Nevada communities.

Finally, the employers, including the State of Nevada, will have equipped young people to hire.

Devoted tremendous effort in bringing the college to a reality.

The new college is already bringing enthusiasm and hope to a large segment of our young people — returning veterans, young high school graduates, and young adults entering the work force — all of whom it is doubtful would be able to further their education through the facilities of the university in Reno.

The Community as a whole should be proud of the new addition, and pleased with the economic impact that it will bring.

Welcome News for Everyone

The beginnings of a Community College for western Nevada located in Carson City should be welcome news for everyone. Most particularly, the advent of a Community College here will permit our local High School graduates to begin their higher education without the necessity and additional expense of attending the University in Reno. Since the first year or two of University study are usually the making or breaking of a person's ability to complete University level studies, the existence of the Community College in Carson City is a distinct advantage since it will make readily available to our High School graduates a facility in which to take these first steps to higher education. Not being an educator, I cannot fully assess the multitude of community benefits as they relate to each other, but the thoughts above expressed are to me the most significant advantages of a local College.

The fact that courses are also available to other citizens and that those can be scheduled in the evenings to accommodate full-time employees of private and public employers who wish to also broaden their education and skills is a distinct benefit provided by the Community College concept. Perhaps in Carson City with its high proportion of public employment, this latest benefit will prove to be the major contribution of the College to our Community.

It has been encouraging to have experienced at even this early date, the desire of the College officials to enter into and cooperate with community events. The remodelling of the Civic Auditorium into classrooms has been accomplished while still retaining the stage and a good portion of the available room intact expressly for the purpose of maintaining a facility for local stage productions, such as those put on by the Proscenium Players.

My feeling is that all of Carson City should be inspired by these small beginnings and that a genuine community response and upsurge of support should be generated and maintained so that beginning with the 1973 session of the State Legislature, construction of a permanent campus can begin in Carson City. In the meantime, we can all be thankful for the sincere and determined efforts of those who have worked so diligently and successfully in establishing the Community College here.

And Best Wishes to Western Nevada Community College

We're proud to have you as part of our Community. We wish you success, good fortune and long life — and to the fortunate students who will receive their higher education through your efforts — we congratulate you on being the first graduating class in the not too distant future.

As President of the Carson City Chamber of Commerce during the formative stage of the college, I'm proud to have been a part of the tremendous effort that was expended in order to make this college a reality.
